Victoria Constance Huang represents clients in intellectual property and commercial litigation matters, with a focus on patents, trade secrets, and trademarks.

Victoria evaluates and litigates IP matters to ensure her clients' business objectives are met. Experienced in both defensive and enforcement strategies, she assesses the strength of patents, trademarks, copyrights, and trade secrets to help technology and wine industry clients protect their intellectual property rights.

Victoria's litigation practice spans the federal district courts, the Patent Trial and Appeal Board (PTAB), the Trademark Trial and Appeal Board (TTAB), the U.S. International Trade Commission (ITC), and arbitration. As a member of litigation teams, she has been responsible for drafting pleadings, petitions for PTAB inter partes review, dispositive motions, written discovery, and infringement and invalidity contentions. Victoria has first-chair deposition experience and has prepared technical experts for depositions and expert reports. Collaborating with clients and their engineers, she has been able to gain their trust and develop non-infringement and claim construction strategies.

In addition to her litigation practice, Victoria also advises clients regarding their trademark strategies, the strength of their patent portfolios, and the protection of intellectual property rights through negotiation. She has analyzed commercial contracts, non-disclosure agreements, and licenses.
